Privacy notice (draft) - printed 2026-11-11

Privacy (draft)
DRAFT. A lawyer has not reviewed it. Accounts are invite-only (alpha) and error reports exist, so it now also covers those.
Your account data, stage by stage (draft)
- What we keep: your alias and every alias you have used, year of birth, country, email (for sign-in links), optional Twitch name, badges, achievements and key actions, and anything you send us. Your birth year, country and email are never shown to other players.
- Error reports: anonymous (no name, email or IP address). You can switch them off in Settings > Privacy, and we count how many people do.
- You can see it: Account > My data shows everything stored about you, and you can copy it.
- Deleting things: you can delete pictures and other items you added. Deleted items may stay on our servers for a limited time before they are removed for good.
- Deleting everything: press Delete my account. Straight away your profile disappears for everyone, including you (you only see a restore screen). For 30 days we keep the data in case you change your mind, and you can restore it by signing in. After 30 days it is permanently deleted. Old aliases stay reserved (without being linked to you) so nobody can pose as a past player.
- Why the wait: to let you undo a mistake and to deal with abuse or safety reports. We only keep personal data we have a reason and your permission to keep.

What is stored, today
- On your device only: your settings, volumes, loadout, alias, which emotes you unlocked, your place in the music, and an anonymous device ID. Nothing here is sent to us unless you send feedback.
- When you send feedback: your message, the type and rating you chose, your device size, an anonymous device ID, and any contact you type. It is stored so the creator can read it, and is emailed to the creator. If you submit music, the link and the rights declaration are stored too.
- Our hosting company (Cloudflare) handles the requests to the sites and keeps its own technical logs, such as your IP address, under its own policy.
- Music and video players from SoundCloud and Spotify load only when you press play, and then they are their own services with their own policies.
- We run no analytics, no advertising and no tracking cookies. One joke page counts page views and button clicks as daily totals, with no names or addresses.

Your choices
You can clear everything on your device by clearing the site's data in your browser. To have a message you sent removed, tell us through the feedback form.

Legal text (draft, for review)
1. Controller. [Operator name and contact to be inserted] is the controller of personal data processed through this service. 2. Data and purposes. Feedback submissions (content, optional contact details, device identifier, technical metadata) are processed to respond to and improve the service (legitimate interests, Art. 6(1)(f) UK GDPR / GDPR). 3. Processors and transfers. The Operator uses Cloudflare, Inc. for hosting, storage and email routing, and for Cloudflare Web Analytics, a visitor statistics script that counts visits and page views (Cloudflare describes it as not using cookies); data may be transferred outside the UK/EEA under appropriate safeguards. 4. Retention. Feedback is kept for as long as needed to improve the service and then deleted or anonymised. 5. Rights. Subject to law you may request access, rectification, erasure, restriction, portability, and object to processing, and lodge a complaint with a supervisory authority (in the UK, the Information Commissioner's Office). 6. Children. The service is intended for people of all ages; no accounts or direct marketing are offered to children. 7. No automated decision-making with legal effect is carried out. 8. Changes. This notice will be updated when accounts or other processing are introduced.
